

Vidyo is an award-winning company whose products are used by industry heavyweights in healthcare, banking, government, and retail. We've been in business for 10 years, are profitable, have active investors who believe in our mission, and have an aggressive product roadmap that will challenge you as a designer.

About the position

Reporting to our UX Lead, this role's function is primarily visual design. On many projects, you'll apply your visual talents to wireframes or rough mockups created by a UX designer, taking their interaction designs from functional to beautiful. You'll also provide illustrations and custom iconography for our suite of apps, taking our visual appeal to the next level and establishing a consistent brand identity across desktop, mobile, and web platforms.

If you like, you'll also have the opportunity to perform your own interaction design and create intuitive interfaces from scratch. This is a great chance for someone who has amazing visual design talent to gain exposure to UX.

A new product line with unique design challenges

We just released version 1.0 of our new desktop video conferencing client, but it's only the first of many products in our next generation product line, Vidyo Neo. In addition to our desktop client, Vidyo Neo includes native mobile apps and large screen room systems. You'll contribute in meaningful ways to all these interfaces, establishing a consistent visual style across our entire portfolio of products.

Marquis customers with high expectations

Not many designers get to work on software used every day at Mozilla, Bloomberg, and Philips (and some other big names we can't mention, but guarantee you know and probably love). Our customers have high expectations from our new product line and your work will be seen and experienced by millions of users around the world.

About you

We're interested in your broad experience and diverse portfolio, so whether you have a fine arts degree or are self-taught with exceptional natural talent, we want to hear from you. It's your work that matters.

General qualifications include:

- Senior-level visual design experience (5+ years) with a stunning portfolio to show for it
- Diverse examples of digital products you've designed, including desktop apps, mobile apps, and/or web sites
- High competency in color science, typography, and other visual design disciplines
- The ability to create UI elements from scratch (logos, icons, illustrations)

- Mastery of at least one design toolset, such as Adobe CS or Affinity, preferably Sketch

Beneficial, but not required:

- A good blend of visual design (most important) and UX/IA (secondary)
- Experience with prototyping tools such as InVision
- Experience designing complex transactional interfaces, especially video conferencing or collaboration tools

A strong portfolio with UI design examples is mandatory — one that demonstrates a clean, modern aesthetic and a variety of styles and perspectives (beyond just flat design) across web, desktop, and mobile. Your ability to create illustrations, logos, and iconography from scratch is essential; we're looking for a true artist.

Please send your resume along with a link to your online portfolio to careers@vidyo.com, referencing UI in the subject line.
